

To Darryn and Jennifer -

To Darryn - The time has come now that you are a grown man and going out into life as a married man. I can hardly believe this time came so fast but it has. I can remember all the good times we had when you were growing up.

- Remember - The days when I was working and Tuesday were my day off. I would listen on that morning for my phone to ring and an "some little voice" would say, "Can you come get me and let me spend the day with you?" You knew what my answer would be - and we will had a great day.

- Remember - You were taking piano lessons from Mary Miller and you rode your bike to her house - and one day after you left her house, you were on your bike going home and you dropped all of your music in the road and I happened to come by just at that time - and I helped you pick it up and I went straight to Hal-Trust and bought a basket and you and I put it on your bike.

- Remember - One afternoon you called me and told me you were going to Converse College in Spartanburg to play in a band concert and you would be there for three days. You asked me if I could get you there and I told you I would call Nedra - which I did and she said come stay as long as you like at her house. I called you back and told you everything was arranged - and I would carry you back and forth to the College everyday. That was a good vacation for me.

- Remember - The trip to New York. That was a wonderful high-light in my life. You and Jennifer made that trip possible for me. I enjoyed it very much. I see places and buildings on T. V. now and I say I was there. And seeing you graduate from Columbia University was a wonderful occasion. And now with you schooling behind you and having a great job - marriage has come into the picture. I don't know how and when your path and Jennifer's path crossed but I am glad they did.

- Jennifer - It was so great that you and Darryn found each other and the first time I saw you, I was hoping the courtship would lead into marriage. I am so glad that you both have worked hard on your education and now have your future and marriage ahead of you. Welcome into the Banknight Family and I hope you and Darryn will have a long, very happy and wonderful life together.

Love to both.
